

Chameleon

Herbie Hancock/Harvey Mason

Comping sample taken from the beginning of the track.

Drum set

Dr.

5

Dr.

[illegible]

B Section Ideas

The B section of Chameleon is rarely played at jam sessions. It is considerably more challenging than the A material (at least on the drums). Rather than transcribe a long comping sample, I've written out a few cells and key ideas Harvey Mason uses that you can take as inspiration.

This is a distillation of the main idea of the section. You could play this on loop as the “main beat” and practice filling around it and improvising variations as you get comfortable.

Core Cell

9

The following systems have no bass drum part. You should use these to develop coordination. Read the three voice patterns, then work out some eighth and sixteenth rhythms against them with the kick.

Two Systems

10

Here's a sample of something you could get by chaining some ideas together.

Example

12

Here are a few more cells I noticed Harvey Mason using. These are nice creative embellishments you can add in as you get comfortable with the flow.

More Cells

13